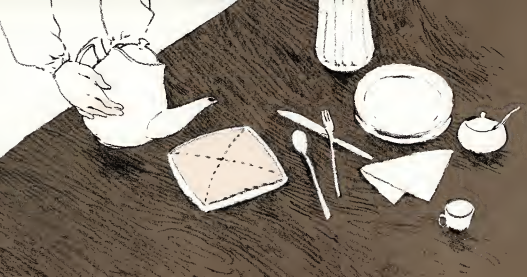
The Tea Party on the Other Side

Story and Illustration by Nagabe

What nice weather today. Let's have a tea party outside.

It's time to prepare, so the two quickly get to work.
First, they take out the tableware from the kitchen shelf.



Plates, tea cups, a teapot, spoons, forks, knives, and a vase with flowers in it, too.

But something seems to be missing.

"I know! We don't have any pancakes!"
exclaims Shiva.
So, the two quickly get back to work
and start making pancakes.

It's time to flip it.

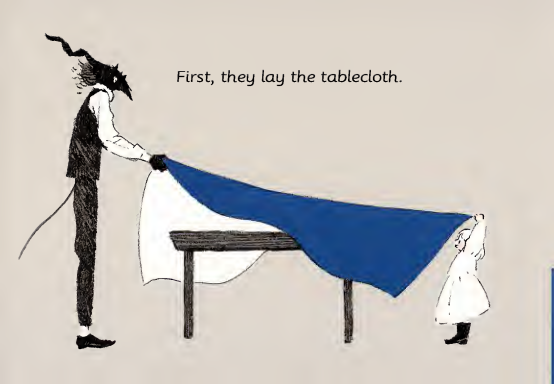
Up we go!

Oh, dear.
That was close.

Now that the pancakes are ready,
Shiva and Teacher hurry to the garden.
It's time to prepare the table.



First, they lay the tablecloth.

Then, they set the table.

Plates, tea cups, a teapot, spoons, forks, knives

and of course,
the freshly made pancakes.

After they finish decorating the trees,
it's finally time to have the tea party.

First, Shiva takes a big bite out of a nice warm pancake. How tasty!
They're so rich and fluffy, she can't stop eating them!

Shiva always puts three sugar cubes in her tea.

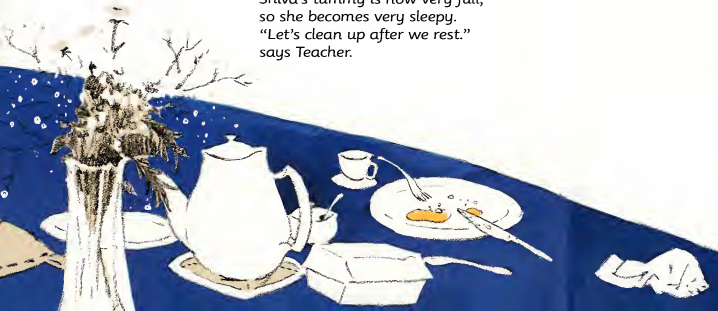
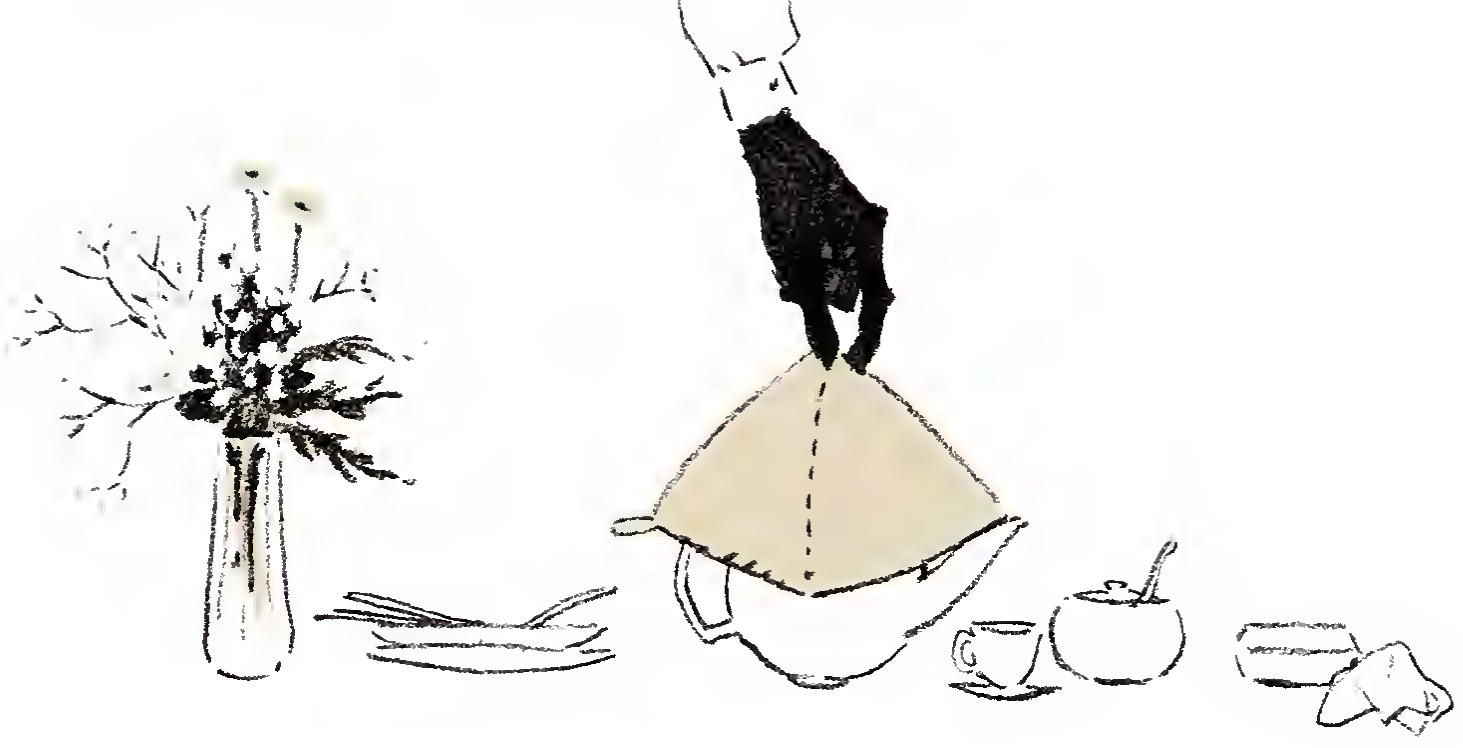
"Isn't that too sweet?" asks Teacher.
"It's just right!" replies Shiva.
"If I don't put in exactly three,
it will be too bitter to drink!"



The two gobble up all the pancakes and drink all the tea.
Shiva's tummy is now very full, so she becomes very sleepy.
"Let's clean up after we rest."
says Teacher.

Shiva nods, rubbing her eyes.
It's time to take a nap.



And with that, the tea party is over.
